

Contents

Marinel Gerritsen – Dieter Stein
Introduction: On “internal” and “external” in syntactic change . . .	1
Olga Fischer
Syntactic change and borrowing: The case of the accusative-and- infinitive construction in English	17
Marianne Mithun
External triggers and internal guidance in syntactic development: Coordinating conjunction	89
Dieter Stein
Do and tun : A semantics and varieties based approach to syntactic change	131
Anne Betten
Sentence connection as an expression of medieval principles of representation	157
John R. Rickford
Grammatical variation and divergence in Vernacular Black English	175
Robert Peter Ebert
Internal and external factors in syntactic change in an historical speech community	201
David Denison
Counterfactual may have	229
Noriko Fujii
Changes in subject marking in Japanese	257
Jean Aitchison
Relative clauses in Tok Pisin: Is there a natural pathway?	295
Anna Giacalone Ramat
The pairing of structure and function in syntactic development . . .	317

Brigitte Schieben-Lange
The history of subordinating conjunctions in some Romance languages	341
Marinel Gerritsen
Internal and external factors in the stabilization of verb-last order in Dutch infinitive clauses	355
Christian Lehmann
Word order change by grammaticalization	395
Donka Minkova — Robert P. Stockwell
On the role of prosodic features in syntactic change	417
Suzanne Fleischmann
Discourse and diachrony: The rise and fall of Old French SI	433
Subject index	475